

"It is said of the Menominee that the sacredness of the land is their very body, the values of the culture are their very soul, the water is their very blood.

It is obvious, then, that the forest and its living creatures can be viewed as food for their existence."

Certificate of Achievement

Scientific Certification Systems does hereby certify that an independent evaluation has been conducted for the forest tract named below, and that this tract has been shown to meet all of the qualifications necessary to be certified as

Well - Managed

By incorporating sustainable management practices into the overall management of their forest, the bearer of this certificate has made a significant contribution toward protecting the habitat, species biodiversity, and timber resource base of the forest in which they are harvesting wood.

"Sustainable development of human culture means improving the quality of human life while living within the carrying capacity of supporting ecosystems."

"Sustainabilility means thinking in terms of whole systems, with all their interconnections, consequences, and feedback loops.

This way of thinking avoids artificial and often misleading categories, such as humanity versus nature or jobs versus the environment."
